

Similarities or Differences Between On-campus and Off-campus Living

University life is an interesting experience. Although living on and off campus have many differences there are two also things that make them similar. There are many things which the students make a decision by themselves, so, they should be thoughtful before resolving. Choosing where they live is one of the most issues that they need consider carefully. Living on campus and living off campus are two ways that have some similarities and differences. Comparing between them is a great idea for the students to choose which one is really suitable. The students who live outside should practise some skills to adapt to new environment. They must believe in themselves and be alert no matter what circumstances happen. Living on campus help students save a large deal of money. Because of the cost of renting a room is really expensive for the students who live off campus and they must pay some extra fees for driving to varsity. Living on campus is a very good thing for a varsity student who is new in the environment. But living off campus is very frightening because there are many problems which have to face a newcomer. When a student decide to live on campus he will have a large number of friends who will help him in the time of danger. But on the other hand living off campus is very much difficult for a student to make a strong friend circle.

Md Jafrul Haque

Group: A

Roll: 113

